

Technical Update #83

Date: August 21, 2002

Re: DLS2002 Software

Accounts created using DLS-3 software are fully compatible with the new DLS2002 software. When DLS2002 opens a DLS-3 account it automatically converts the panel and module information to the new format.

It has been discovered that during the conversion the modules are added to the account, but the information contained within is not converted. The panel information, however, is converted properly.

A file is being developed to correct this issue and will be posted on the Web site within the next few days. If you are already using the DLS2002 software, please be aware of this issue. Upload all module information when connecting to a panel with one of these converted files. This will ensure the information stored in the account is correct.
